"POP" HALLEY PREDICTS SOUTHWEST LEAGUE TRIUMPH TONIGHT FOR WASHINGTON BOWLERS

Victory Against Brockton All-Stars Will Give Local Rollers Look In for Championship of Whole Country-Baltimore Wants to Meet Winners of Tourney.

By KIRK C. MILLER.

BROCKTON, Mass., March 20.-After being closeted with his team of duckrollers for more than an hour through which period he impressed upon them the importance of the Brockton-Washington series which opens here tonight, Captain Halley emerged predicting a victory for the pin spillers from the Na-

Never did football coach address his men in such sincere tones before going into an important game than did Halley when he implored the little party of bowlers, of which he is in charge to go onto the alleys tonight with but one determination, that of getting the drop on the Brockton rollers while in their

When this afternoon's conference was over each member of the team had been injected with so much pride in the fact that he is representing the city of Washington in the duckpin world that there seemed to be nothing to it, but victory for Washington. Every mother's son of them are worked up to such a pitch that the outcome of tonight's sames whatever it may be is sure to represent their utmost efforts.

Should the Washington all-star team be successful in its attack of Brockton down the duckpin thoroughfare, it will have an excellent look-in on the championship of the country, Brockton has just won the Massachusetts State title from Lawrence, and with the local pinners defeated, Baltimore is the only other foe to vanquish. The Monumental City has already challenged the District team should it be successful in its present battle.

Prize List for Teams and Individuals Is Most Attrac-

With the fourth and final series of games in the Southwestern Duckpin League beginning with tonight's two sets, the individuals in that organization are beginning to look into the attractive prize list which has been provided, and which will be distributed among the teams and individuals making the best marks for the season. Indeed, much speculation is heard at Manager Murphy's alleys nightly as to the probable winners, and until May 1, when the season closes, this opinion is gradually go-

President Riston has approved the fol lowing list of prizes to be awarded for stellar work down the alleys in the Southwestern League. The only requirement to be eligible for these awards i that competitors must have rolled in at least forty-five regular league games

WHO'S WHO ON ALLEYS

We wanted to wait until the longest day in the year to spring this glowing "confession," but we're afraid our corridor of fame will be ended by June 21, and there is too much to the big fellow under examination to allow him to be slighted, even by three months and two days. (Count 'em for yourselves, boys!) Lemmon is rated as being the highest class bowler of Washington, for his class is so high that he is his only competitor for the honor. At the last census, Lemmon's class was found to be about six feet eight inches, and they had to establish a new classifica-

However, there is more to Lemmon than height. Regardless of the fact that he has the three Arlington wireless towers all "jealoused up," he has the bowlers in the Patent Examiners' League breaking their arms in an effort to catch up with him in the race down the alleys. Lemmons stands "away out in front" of the patent lawyer fraternity when it comes to duckpins, and for all we know he has something on the others for reading law. At the last compilation of figures Lemmon's average read something like 104, while the next nearest competitor could show an average of only 92. If this does not demonstrate the superiority which he claims on the alleys, we will stand him up beside the entire league and then ask for your verdict.

In 1911 Wagner's throwing arm went back on him, and he was out of the game most of the season in 1912, but in 1913 he played a star game. Word was received today from Joe Wood, who is received today from an appendicitis operation, that he would report around April 1.

The last one carried the New York Teston to the floor from which he did not rise until the referee had completed his work.

The real bout of the evening was a six-round affair between young Herman Miller and Mike Uraine. Miller displayed hitting proclivities of a high order, but he was generally beaten to the lead by his opponent Uraine showed a pretty left jab, keeping Miller's head bobbing.

The first three rounds were marvelously even, though Miller's handlers thought he was winning, and held him in check. Had he torn loose from the beginning, it might have shaded his fast opponent. Holding back cheated him a victory. Miller's powerful left to the stomach would have stopped a fee
